> Last spring I walked part of the Lycian Way with my uncle Haluk. He is an experienced hiker, so he chose a route from Fethiye to Kaş. I wanted to go paragliding in Ölüdeniz instead, but my uncle said, “Walking is slower, but you see more.” He was right. The first day was easy. We walked through pine forests and had lunch near a quiet beach. The second day was the most challenging part of the trip. It was really hot, the path was rocky and my backpack felt heavier than a sack of potatoes. On the third day, we reached an ancient Lycian tomb on a hill, and the view was more breathtaking than any photo. My advice? Adventures are great, but don’t take silly risks. Check the weather, carry enough water and tell someone your route. Next year I’d rather hike than fly, but maybe I’ll try paragliding too!

1. Why did Selin choose the Lycian Way route at first?
