1. Görkem wanted to call his cousin Oğuz in Sivas to talk about their summer plans. He dialled the number quickly, but he made a mistake with one digit. A soft voice answered: “Hello, Nazmiye speaking.” Görkem was confused. “Sorry, I think I have the wrong number,” he said politely. But the woman didn’t hang up. She said she was eighty-two years old and lived alone, and nobody had called her for three days. She was happy to hear a young voice. They talked for ten minutes about her garden and her cats. Before he hung up, Görkem made a decision: “Your house is near my school. I’ll visit you on Saturday with my mum, if that’s OK.” On Saturday they took her some fresh bread and flowers. Now Görkem calls her every Sunday, and she tells him stories about the old days. He still talks to Oğuz, of course — after checking the number twice!
