1. On Sunday evening, Hira’s phone started buzzing. Her friends were sharing the same post again and again: “Schools in Antalya are closed tomorrow because of the heat!” Everyone was excited, and some students were already planning a beach day. But Hira wasn’t sure. The post had no name and no link, and the picture looked old. So she visited the official website of the Provincial Directorate of National Education. There was no news about a holiday. She also checked the date on the photo: it was from three years ago. Hira wrote in the group chat, “It’s fake news. Please don’t share it.” A few students didn’t believe her, but on Monday morning, the school gates were open as usual. Their English teacher heard the story and asked Hira to give a short talk to the class. Her advice was simple: check the source, look at the date, and ask a teacher or a parent if you are not sure.
