1. Deniz is a fourteen-year-old student from Konya, and she is keen on coding. Last year there was a big problem in her home: every evening her family argued about chores. Her brother Selim never took out the garbage on time, and her father always forgot to buy bread. Deniz was tired of the arguments, so she created a simple chore app for the family. In the app, everyone has a list of responsibilities. When you finish a chore, you tick it and earn a star. At the end of the week, the person with the most stars chooses the Sunday breakfast menu. Deniz's mother is in charge of adding new tasks, and nobody can delete them. "The best part is that people keep their promises now," says Deniz. "Selim still can't stand ironing, but he doesn't complain anymore." The family has used the app for eight months, and there are far fewer arguments at home.
