Next Saturday is my grandmother’s seventieth birthday, and our family is organizing a surprise party for her. My mother made a guest list last week. We invited twenty-five guests, including Grandma’s old friends from her village.

Everybody has a job. First, my father ordered a big chocolate cake from the bakery. Then my sister and I wrapped the presents. On Saturday morning, we are going to decorate the living room with balloons and flowers. My uncle is going to bring the beverages: lemonade and ayran. Grandma loves baklava, so my aunt is going to bring some from Gaziantep.
