> The northern bald ibis is a strange-looking bird with black feathers and a red face with no feathers. In Türkiye, it lives in Birecik, a town by the Euphrates River in Şanlıurfa. The birds usually come back to Birecik in February and lay their eggs on the rocks. In the 1950s, there were hundreds of ibises in the town, but people used chemicals on their farms, and many birds died. By 1989, there was only one wild bird left. Luckily, a breeding centre in the town protected some ibises. Today the ibises live in Birecik again, and every year visitors come to see them.
