Last July, Batuhan and his family went rafting on the Köprülü River in Antalya. Before they started, their instructor, Cem, gave everyone a helmet and a life jacket and explained the safety rules. ‘Don’t take risks and always listen to me,’ he said.
The trip took about two hours. The water was very cold, and some parts of the river were really fast. Batuhan’s little sister Duygu screamed when the boat went down a small waterfall, but then she laughed. ‘It was more exciting than a roller coaster!’ she said. In the middle of the trip, they stopped and swam in a calm part of the river. Batuhan thinks rafting is challenging but not too dangerous if you follow the rules. Next year, he wants to try canoeing.

> ADVENTURE FORUM — Which extreme sport would you rather try?
> Tuana (14): I'd rather go paragliding than bungee-jumping. Flying over Ölüdeniz must be fascinating, and it's less frightening than jumping from a bridge!
> Göktuğ (15): I prefer caving to all other sports. It's quieter and more mysterious. Last year I explored a cave near Karaman with my uncle and saw amazing rocks.
> Damla (13): Honestly, I'm not keen on extreme sports. I think they're too dangerous. I prefer skateboarding in the park with my friends. It's more entertaining for me.
> Rüzgar (14): Motor-racing is the most exciting sport in the world! But I'm too young, so I play racing games for now.

> Hello, travellers! Last month I visited Mardin with my parents, and it was incredible. Mardin is an ancient city in the south-east of Türkiye. Its stone houses look golden in the evening sun. We stayed in a historic stone mansion that is now a bed and breakfast. Every morning, the owner served us a delicious breakfast with local cheese and honey.
> On the first day, we visited Zinciriye Madrasa and enjoyed the view of the Mesopotamian plains. The next day, we walked through the narrow streets of the old bazaar and bought some handmade soap as souvenirs.
