It’s Thursday afternoon in our classroom in İzmir. On Thursdays, we usually revise the week’s lessons and read silently. But today we are doing a group project. Our school is 125 years old this year, so we are preparing a poster about its history. Right now, Asya is searching for old photos on the computer. Burak and Can are counting the students in the old school lists. I’m writing a short text, and my partner is reading it aloud. Our teacher is walking around and helping us. Group work is really effective and creative!
