17. When Deniz was fourteen, she was bullied at school for months. She felt lonely and anxious, and her grades began to fall. What helped her most, she says, was writing songs about her feelings. A year later, encouraged by her music teacher, she performed one of these songs at a school concert. To her surprise, several students came up to her afterwards and told her they had experienced the same thing. Deniz and her new friends then started a club where students could share their problems and support each other. Today, at the age of eighteen, Deniz visits schools across the country to talk about bullying and to remind young people that everyone has the right to feel safe at school.
