11. Last year, my family made a big decision: we moved from İstanbul to a small village near Muğla. In the city, my parents spent nearly three hours in traffic every day, and we hardly ever saw them before dinner. Now my father works online from home, and my mother has opened a small shop that sells homemade jam. At first, I didn't like village life at all. There was no cinema, no shopping mall and the internet was slow. My new school had only forty students! However, things changed after a few months. I joined the school's nature club, learned how to grow tomatoes and made friends with our neighbours' kids. We ride our bikes everywhere because the roads are safe. Of course, I still miss some things about the city, like my old friends and the seaside cafés. But I sleep better, I feel healthier and, most importantly, I spend more time with my family.
