Warm-up

- What did you want to be when you were very small?
- What job do your parents do?
- Which job do you think is the most exciting?

Reading

What do you want to be when you grow up? We asked three students.

Deniz is eleven. “I want to be a vet because I love animals. I have two cats and a dog, and I always take care of them,” she says.

Arda is twelve. He would like to be a game designer. “I play games, but I also want to make them. I am learning to code at an after-school club,” he explains.

Selin is thirteen. She wants to be a pilot. “I would like to travel around the world. My aunt is a pilot, and she says the job is hard but exciting.”

Of course, dreams can change. Many adults today have jobs that did not exist when they were children, like app developer or social media manager. The important thing is to keep learning and stay curious.
