C Reading

4 × 5 = 20 puan

Read the text and answer the questions. (Metni okuyun ve soruları cevaplayın.)

> In some Turkish towns, there is a long-standing tradition known as “askıda ekmek”, which means “bread on the hook”. When customers buy bread at a bakery, they can pay for an extra loaf and leave it “on the hook”. Later, someone who cannot afford bread can take it for free, without having to explain anything or feel embarrassed. The tradition is based on the values of sharing and protecting people’s dignity. In recent years, the idea has spread to other businesses, such as cafés and bookshops, where people pay in advance for a coffee or a book for a stranger.

1. What does a customer do in the “askıda ekmek” tradition?
