> Table manners change from country to country. In Turkey, it is polite to offer food to guests again and again, and guests often say “Elinize sağlık” to thank the cook. In China, you shouldn’t leave your chopsticks standing up in a bowl of rice, because it reminds people of a funeral custom. In Ethiopia, people often eat from one large shared plate with their right hand, using a soft bread called injera. In the USA, leaving a tip of 15–20% at restaurants is expected. Knowing these customs can save you from embarrassing moments when you travel.
