> Sixteen-year-old Arda has never met his best friend Kai in person. Kai lives in New Zealand, and the two boys met three years ago in an online group for young astronomy fans. Because of the time difference, Arda often wakes up early to video chat with Kai before school. They help each other with homework, share music and talk about their problems. “Kai understands me better than many people I see every day,” Arda says. However, his parents were worried at first, so Arda introduced them to Kai and his family on a video call. Now both families are planning to meet when Kai visits Turkey next summer.
